*Welcome into the 7th (probably) season of ETM!

Leone: We now have more editable sims in the SOLVER. Leone will go through in greater detail on his Saturday night show, so tune in. You can also sim multiple contests at a time this year.

Spent a lot of time improving projections in the offseason. We also re-added the Player Comps tool after a hiatus the last couple years. It shows the top 50 comps for a player on a given week.

Dink: Very excited about the improvements to the SOLVER, projections, and a greater focus on FanDuel contests. This will by far be our best season of FanDuel coverage.

Week 1

Leone: Best week to IKB because of input volatility. We have the best assumptions and projections in the industry, but we haven't seen anyone play yet. There will be spots where the sims won't like a guy, but there's a lot of upside if you get on the right IKBs. Especially in sim-heavy contests.

Dink: Our projections on the whole will be good, but there are individual plays that no one will be able to predict, like Davante Adams not being in the goal line packages for the Rams on Thursday.

Game Scores

Leone: Four late window games. LAC-ARI and LV-MIA are important late games. LAC-ARI has gamestack potential and LV has two cheap pieces in Mayer and Tucker. This will probably be an emergency late-swap week.

Dink: Difficult late swap week to execute. Mayer is $2,900 on DK and there's no viable player at that same salary level. So you'd need to have a higher-salary player in your lineup and make it a 2v2 swap. You could run late window stacks so you have more spots to get flexible.

NO-DET

Leone: Gibbs is a clear smash. Goff is a good price and can be stacked with Amon-Ra, Jameson, and LaPorta. Olave, Juwan, and Etienne are all solid. Strongly considering the DET double or onslaught on DK with Olave, Vele, or Juwan coming back.

NO-DET

Dink: How many players from this game is too many? Depends on field size. In a small field contest, you could get into 6 players but you can run into very similar lineups. Would limit it to 5 players in large field. Will likely have a piece of this game in every lineup even if not playing a stack. This will be the highest-owned game without a doubt. Etienne and Jameson will probably be the lowest-owned of the game but no one is going under the radar.

Juwan and LaPorta will be lower owned on FD because of the Mayer ownership.

TB-CIN

Leone: Higher game total here than NO-DET. Like this one especially on FD. You can skinny stack Burrow-Chase. Ownership dictates the TB bringback. Mike Evans is gone so there's variance in how they play, and who the TD scorers will be. Sean Tucker is trending toward playing. He was the primary goal line RB last year, but it could have been a result of Bucky's shoulder injury. Most interested in Bucky and Egbuka. Ted Hurst is an interesting cheap play in large field, as he had a lot of 1st team reps in the preseason.

Dink: CIN is condensed so they're excited to stack. Concerned the field might overplay this game because of the perception of CIN's defense. TB has a strong OL but CIN poured a lot of resources into their defense this offseason. TB's pass catchers have modest ownership projections making them excited. Instincts are cautious but like the ownership. Would be bummed if he plays into it but ownership steams. Otton will be minimally owned because it's a strong TE slate. You'd need him to get 15+ points. Like him for large field.

BAL-IND

Leone: Probably not gamestacking this. Could see a Dimes-Warren stack with a BAL bringback.

Dink: More interested in the BAL side. Lamar is squeezing. There's a perception that you can't stack him and that he doesn't hit his ceiling when Zay Flowers hits his. Mostly think that's just small sample size. Flowers has been so close to scoring more TDs. Regression can hit and he just becomes a slight-below-average TD scorer. Then bring and IND piece back.

GPP Game Scores

ARI-LAC

Leone: Excited to play LAC. They can blow their team total out. If NO-DET steams especially high in small field, that directly takes ownership away from here. You can use Hampton alongside Herbert. Don't necessarily need a bringback.

CHI-CAR

Leone: This one starts to sim well in large field. You could see them both getting very run-heavy. Rome looks like he'll play but could be limited. Could get more condensed on Loveland and Burden. McMillan is a solid one-off.

Dink: Agree this is more of a large field game to stack. The ceiling is high if CHI gets uptempo and pushes it. CHI OL has a big advantage over CAR DL so Swift is in a good spot. Chuba is also in play vs a weak CHI DL and Brooks working through another injury. Coker is an under-the-radar play. Especially like Loveland and Chuba.

BUF-HOU

Leone: Stroud-Nico-Schultz is interesting in something like the $5 Milly Maker. BUF has a completely new defense this year. Could bring DJ Moore back.

GB-MIN

Leone: Pretty into this for stacks. No Josh Jacobs and a more condensed WR tree. They could push the pace this year. Playing an aggressive MIN defense that could further push it. Then there's a lot of questions with Kyler and MIN. Addison is especially cheap on FD and Jefferson is strong on both sites. He'll be a fraction of Chase's ownership. Might be aggressive for small field contests but better for mid-sized. Starting with Kyler-Jefferson-Hockenson gives you late-swap options.

Dink: MIN defense has been strong but can give up big plays. Kyler-Jefferson is one of Dink's favorite stacks. Like Reed coming back. You could also get into Lloyd.

Good Chalk Bad Chalk

Quarterback

Leone: Goff, Shough, Burrow, and Herbert are the 4 highest owned. Will look at getting away from Goff in small field because of the steam. Projections like T Law and we didn't cover them in Game Scores. Playing a very different CLE defense compared to last year. Nice projection on P Wash to stack with. BTJ comes into play on FD with the TD upside and salary.

Dink: Lawrence has a rushing component, especially inside the redzone. Very confident his ownership stays low and Washington stays modestly-owned. Good spot for that stack. Like Hurts-Devonta-Goedert in large field vs WAS. Could make the case for Willis or Geno because of the tight pricing. Can pair Geno with Wilson or Mitchell. Willis won't be in Dink's player pool. He could have a good score but not carry any teammates along.

Running Back

Leone: Gibbs will be massively owned. In a nut spot. Do you play game theory or just play him with the ownership? Have Gibbs in 3 of 4 high-stakes lineups. In the Player Comps tool, he has 3 comps of 50 point performances but there are also a handful of 5-10 point comps. Otherwise there are a lot of low double digit owned RBs. Very excited about a fresh Derrick Henry. Ceiling is up there with Achane. Hard to predict, but some of these $6K RBs will squeeze. Interested in playing 3 RBs on DK this week. Top lineups are using more 3 RB than the field and it won't be super owned this week.

Pivots: Thinking hard about Bijan. Looking like he'll squeeze and the whole offense could run through him. Breece is looking like he'll squeeze as well. Etienne will probably get pushed up because of the game environment. Would be into Bucky if he were to squeeze but no promises. Rico Dowdle at $5.2K could lead in carries and be the goal line back. Could make a similar case for Warren if you prefer him.

Dink: If he were playing one lineup, it would have Gibbs. So confident in DET's offense being successful that if Gibbs fails, the points will come through Goff. There's no escaping the ownership so will probably lean more into Gibbs and play other stacks that can outscore Goff. Easier to fade Goff and the passing game than Gibbs. Achane is likely to get loaded up with touches. Very curious to see his receiving volume. View him as a tougher play as the 2nd highest owned RB. Could see the field backing off him and making ownership even more flat. More excited about Hampton but concerned he steams. Least bullish on Jeanty. Great matchup and price, but there are questions about his health and the overall offense.

Good Chalk Bad Chalk

Running Back

Dink: Pivots: Don't think the field will play 13% Jeanty. Previously mentioned not liking him as much, but he becomes a lot more interesting in the 5-8% ownership range. For PIT RBs, you know Rodgers throws it to RBs, making them particularly strong on DK. Don't think Chase Brown will be unique in a Burrow stack so not crazy about him.

FanDuel: Hampton is the clear #2 RB here because of price. Lloyd is just $4,900. Could see people getting sucked into playing him more than they should. He's a great price but there's fragility and real opportunity cost. Dink would rather pay down at WR than play Lloyd, given the tough matchup and potentially limited workload. James Cook could really get squeezed. Tough matchup but he's highly efficient. There's 80 yards and 2 TD potential for Chuba.

Wide Receiver

Leone: Chase, Amon-Ra and Olave are the top 3. Then Flowers and Tre Tucker rounding out the top 5 in ownership. Gibbs carrying so much ownership keeps any of them from really steaming. Tucker will certainly be the preferred punt. There's a non-zero chance Chase is a little banged up.

Pivots: Like the LAC guys. They aren't low owned but also not chalk. It'll be interesting to see where Egbuka lands. Has Evans gone and a strong game environment, but is coming off the toe injury. Drake London is going overlooked because of the QB situation. Interesting in mid-large field contests. Downs has gotten a lot of offseason hype. Not sure of Pierce's role after being out all offseason.

Dink: Will probably dock Chase's projection a little bit. Amon-Ra can "fail" by scoring his usual 20, as long as he doesn't hit his 40 ball. These players aren't bad chalk, there are just other options that aren't that different of plays but at lower ownership. Not suggesting to be super underweight the top 3, but you can play guys like Jefferson and Collins as pivots.

Pivots: Think QJ is a good pivot off Tre Tucker. Think they separate in ownership. Wilson and Devonta Smith could be pure #1s that's hard to project. Don't think the field gets very aggressive with them and wouldn't be surprised if they separate from their teammates. Coker is like the QJ play with no ownership.

Good Chalk Bad Chalk

Wide Receiver

Dink: FanDuel: Watson gets into the mix on DK. Tucker is less of a factor. Dink isn't the highest on Watson when he comes with ownership. He had a great finish to the season. Will be on him in future weeks, but don't think this is the spot. Would rather play Ladd, Burden, Wilson, Washington. Dink likes the idea of playing 3 RBs, excluding Lloyd, and concentrating your WRs in the $6,500 and below bucket. You can naturally build high-upside teams with that build.

Tight End

Leone: Mayer is the chalk on both sites. He's good chalk. He could be 50-60% owned on a different slate. LaPorta, Juwan, Loveland, and Warren are secondary chalk. Will consider Hockenson in Kyler stacks. Kraft pops as a ceiling play.

Dink: Mayer stepped up last year with Bowers out in a completely dysfunctional offense and delivered. He's been productive when he's had chances and has little-to-no target competition. He'll be running routes in the areas of the field that work for an old Kirk Cousins. He would be a thousand dollars more expensive if pricing wasn't released before the Bowers injury.

It's a very strong TE week. Favorite TE after Mayer is Loveland. He's been the healthiest pass-catcher for Bears this offseason. Think the pass game runs through him. Can get into Schultz and Ott for low-owned options. Silva was very into Freiermuth. Hesitant on Kraft this week, given the strength of the position.

D/ST

Leone: Jets, Browns, Raiders, and Titans are all cheap options. Jags are more expensive but project well.

Dink: Chalk defenses are mostly solid. Being a tight slate, it's a spot where the salary relief helps. Some high-end D/STs, like Jags and Eagles could go overlooked. We talked on the DFS pod last week about how top end teams are paying up at D/ST more frequently.
